

Food Mysteries: Episode - 1

Stuck in a place:

Where protein is luxury, thinking and taking care of health is weakness, saying no to junk is vulnerability.

Medicines are trusted. Supplements are suspicious. Nutrients are occasional, and outing and having fun is grooming.

Fruits are eaten when sick, but waste of money when stomach is full of wheat.

Obese Doctors are trusted more than fitness trainers. Fast food is a treat, but home-cooked meals are a hassle until they are tasty.

Weight loss pills are a quick fix, but consistent workouts are a long-term investment. Sitting all day is normal, but a 20-minute intense training is risky.

Bodybuilders are 'obsessed with appearance', but obese bodies are 'healthy'. Sleep is betrayal, but exhaustion is accepted as a norm.

Lemon causes sore throat but biryani helps in weight gain. Refined oil is a must and salad is a decoration.

Spices are crucial and important but eggs cause heat in the body. Burgers give strength, but bananas "cause mucus."

Sugar gives energy, but dates are for Ramadan. A 6-pack is 'showing off', but a swollen belly is 'just aging'.

Eating good and taking care of health is selfish, but dipping rusk in tea in breakfast is a sacrifice.

People pray for health and eat like they are unaware and deserve it.
